Virtual 360 home Tour are no longer simply a cool gadget for real estate agents to show off their internet marketing skills. Home buyers are demanding 360 home Tour as an integral element in the home buying process. Seventy-eight percent of those who shop for homes on the Internet say the most important feature when searching online is quality 360 home Tour -- followed closely by detailed property descriptions and virtual 360 home Tour, according to the 2003 National Association of Realtors Profile of Home Buyers and Sellers.

What's more, those home buyers requesting virtual 360 home Tour are more likely to be smarter, wealthier consumers in their prime home-buying years, compared to those who don't require 360 home Tour in order to purchase a home or real estate property. On a typical day, 2 million people are using the Internet to go on virtual 360 home Tour, according to the Pew Internet & American Life Project.

Virtual 360 home Tour, however, are among some of the most common 360 home Tour taken. Pew's nationwide phone survey to examine the impact of the Internet interviewed 914 adults, 534 of whom are Internet users. The survey said those who take 360 home Tour were more often single, white, women, aged 28 to 49, earning $50,000 a year or more, graduate degree holders and broadband access subscribers. Home buyers like virtual 360 home Tour because they provide them with an immediate and efficient way to view and eliminate the homes they don't like and choose the homes they want to go see in person.

Overall, the Pew study said, 45 percent -- 54 million -- of American adults who use the Internet have taken virtual 360 home Tour, but more -- 60 percent -- of those who have broadband connections at home and 62 percent of those who have broadband connections at work have taken virtual 360 home Tour of some type.

Virtual 360 home Tour making also takes skilled professionals to output high-quality, life-like videos. Virtual 360 home Tour produced unprofessionally can harm a listing more than help it. Occasionally, the best virtual 360 home Tour may not be of the home itself, but, say, of its unobstructed view of the ocean, hillsides or meadow. Putting a home's unique feature in its best light with a virtual 360 home Tour and leaving the rest to good old still photography remains an option.

For example, it's nearly impossible to overcome "bloating" rooms when the confines of a small space forces the virtual 360 home tour maker to snap on the wide angle lens to capture the flow of the room. Real Hollywood magic on the silver screen or an in-person visit remains necessary to see a home as it really exists.

Why Photographer's Have An Advantage

"I believe that to excel in the real estate sales business you need to know how to take quality pictures of the home listings or real estate property," says Ellen Hart, "because basically virtual 360 home Tour are really panoramic images that have been stitched into one into one virtual home tour.

"Any virtual 360 home tour system, as good as it is, doesn't just do 360 home Tour automatically. There still needs to be a certain level of talent and ability in the person who is operating the equipment and using the virtual tour software to turn out really great 360 home Tour.

"I know some REALTORS have bought the real tour software and equipment that are producing virtual 360 home Tour, but from what I've seen on the MLS home listings and things on the Internet, most REALTORS don't have a clue about how to make good 360 home Tour.

"The RTV software, itself, does compensate somewhat for differences in light between one home picture and another. Just as you can't make an artist by giving them paints and canvas, you can't make someone a real estate photographer or virtual 360 home Tour photographer just by giving them equipment and software."
